KILLED HER HUSBAND

TERRIBLE SUNDAY TRAGEDY IN PAIRPAX COUNTY.

John Harmon Shot by His Wife, Whom He Had Deserted-She Had Warned Him Not to Enter the

The Washington Post of yesterday gives the following particulars of a terrible tragedy that was enacted in Fairfax county Sunday afternoon:

Mary Harmon shot and instantly killed her husband, John Harmon, a farmer, about 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the home of her mother, five miles east of Fairfax Courthouse, Va. Lieutenant Peter Rennie, of the staff of Major Bartlett, Sixth Battalion, District of Columbla militla, was passing the farm-house at the time and was an eye-witness to the murder.

After killing her husband Mrs. Harmon ran, hatless and barefooted, to the house of Justice-of-the-Peace Vant Trumbull. told him what she had done, and gave herself into custody.

Justice Trumbull commissioned John Beach a special constable, and he took the woman to Fairfax and lodged her in the county jail. As she rode along the country road with the constable Mrs. Harmon was calm and self-possessed, and discussed with the officer the killing of her husband. She said she believed that she had done a justifiable act, for Harmon had abused her, never properly supported her, and had finally deserted her. HE LEFT HER.

Harmon and his wife, it seems, lived on a farm not far from the house of Mrs. Harmon's mother. About fourteen months ago Harmon left his wife and her eight children, and a short time after the separation she and the children went to live with her mother. After some months Harmon commenced making overtures to Harmon commenced making overtures to her to return to him again, but she al-ways told him that she would never again live with him. She told him, too, that she did not care to see him, and that she did not want him to come around

"No, John, I never can," she replied.
Harmon refused to accept her decision as final, and started to climb through the

The husband raised himself upon the woman The husband raised himself upon the ledge of the window, and the woman sprang back to the centre of the room. As quick as a flash she caught up a double-barrelled shotgun and fired one barrel. She was a but few feet from her husband, and the entire charge of heavy shot struck him just under the right cyc. Withouts a word Harmon fell out of the window and dropped to the ground a and dropped to the ground a As before stated Lieutenant Rennie, of

As before stated Lieutenant Renne, or Washington, was passing the house in a light buggy. With him was a liveryman named Cummings, of Round Hill, Va. Their attention was attracted by the voices of Harmon and his wife. They turned their heads to look, and the next nstant the report of a shotgun rang out nd Harmon dropped to the ground a

"Mother, I have killed John!" VERY MUCH EXCITED.

The mother came down from an upstairs room, and the children flocked about. Lieutenant Rennie tried to question the woman, but at that moment she was too excited to give intelligible answers. Mrs. Harmon was without shoes or stockings, having removed them on account of the heat, and her hair was unbraided and tangled. The children stood about crying and moaning, and the old mother stood quietly in the door of the house, as if stricken dumb by the awful blow that had fallen upon the tamily.

While Lieutenant Rennie was debating While Lieutenant Rennie was debating as to the best course to pursue Mrs. Harmon started up the path on a run, turned into the road, and disappeared. She had gone to the house of the nearest justice to give herself into the hands of the law, as above stated. MRS. HARMON'S STORY.

Mrs. Harmon was seen in her ceil in the Fairfax jall Sunday night by a representative of the Post. She had brushed her hair and was more presenta-sie than when Lieutenant Rennie saw her. The was quite composed, too, and told her story simply and slowly. Mrs. Harmon is forty-two years old, and not good looking, although in her youth she may have been a pretty country girl. "I am the mother of his eight children," she said, "and for a great many years I have suffered on his account. He never properly provided for me or the children, and has beaten me, kicked me, and knockand has beaten me, kicked me, and knockd me down times without number. He has made me work all day picking berries, when the children needed my care, and has even driven the little children out in the hot sun to pick berries, and would not let them quit when they were worn out. He never decently supported me, and to get a little money occasional-ly I had to take in washing from neighwas sitting at the window, and had no thought of a quarrel with him. When he insisted on coming through the window I told him not to or I would kill him. I swear before God I didn't mean it. I just said it in fun, but when he continued to climb in I jumped back and grabbed the gun. I really didn't mean to kill him then. But I got the gun up to my waist, and then I must have pulled the trigger. I never aimed at him at all, and I think I was about eight feet away from him. I believe, though, that I had a right to kill him. I don't know what will become of me; and I don't know what will become of the children," and tears began to roll down the face of the poor woman, "but I will say that he was never good to me."

In the neighborhood and at Fairfax the murder created great excitement. A the murder created great excitement. A consensus of opinion seemed to be that Harmon had been a worthless but harmless sort of fellow. No one seemed to regret greatly that he had been killed. while much sympathy was expressed for the woman. The neighbors credited her with being an upright, hard-working woman, and said that her efforts to pro-vide for and care for her children had been strenuous and unceasing.

There was an instance in this county at the last election of the operation of the Walton law when a candidate's name is not printed on the ticket. In the Clarks ville District there was on the ticket only one name for supervisor. Mr. Armistead Burrell was supported for re-election as supervisor, and his name written by the voter, and he was elected by 39 majority, out of over 300 votes cast. This is the first case of the kind reported under the election law. The Walton law grows it favor upon trial, and intelligent voters would be opposed to a return to the old system of voting.
